CHAPTER 9

§ 9.8

Table of Authorities

Easy Access to Cited Material

A table of authorities is simply an index of all materials relied upon in the preceding legal document. While not required in most legal writings (except appellate briefs) the table of authorities is a nice addition, making authorities within the document easier to locate. The table may be arranged in two ways:

Grouped by Kind of Authority

The most common form of table lists the authorities by groups: Constitutions, Statutes, Cases, and so forth. The highest form of authority is listed first. Within each group, the authorities should be listed by order of their appearance within the document.

Listed in Order of Appearance

Also acceptable is a table of authorities that lists the authorities in the order in which they appear in the document.

The table of authorities is attached at the end of the brief. Also attach copies of any authorities listed in the table of authorities, stapling them behind the table and brief.
